The percent difference between my hand calculations and the software calculations = .002% due to rounding errors. Other than that the Software and Hand calculations match up well although the sign needs to be changed on the force developed in the rod.